

The Standards for Computer-On-Modules are evolving

Name Christian Eder

Abstract text The CPU technology is developing rapidly in two directions: Power consumption is lowered and performance is pushed out further. The Computer-On-Module Standards COM Express, Qseven and SMARC need to reflect the new possibilities provided by the latest CPU technologies. The presentation goes into the technical details of the latest developments (ongoing or already released) and also provides an overview which new application fields can be addressed.